Rob's life-size impalas installed in their new home:
The National Wildlife Art Museum of America

The photo above shows Rob's magnificent piece of 'Three Greater Kudu' and his elephant 'Steamed up' in the prestigious National Wildlife Art Museum's annual show.

Rob was honoured to find the prestigious Trustees Purchase award on his Kudu. This means it will become part of the Museums permanent collection. Rob is pictured here with Peggy Mays, one of the Museums Trustees and a major donor. The museum now owns four of Robs bronzes.

The elephant was also in demand, and was snapped up by another of the Museums Trustees.

The National Wildlife Art Museum of America is the only museum in the world dedicated to wildlife art.

It is incredibly beautiful and unique, with an amazing collection of art. (the photo of the elk bronze, above left, is not Robs but marks the entrance to the Museum) The annual exhibition brings much interest and over a thousand guests attended the private viewing spread over two evening events.

The photos above shows how it blends in so cleverly to its extremely scenic location.

Below: a general scene of Rob talking to guests (left) and the live band with wine and toasties laid on for the guests.
